& TRAINING SERVICES

Indigenous Labour Market Information (LMI) Survey

Did you know there is a lack of workforce information available about First Nations?

The LMI project explores employment-related data from working age (fifteen or older) Indigenous Citizens on/off reserves. Approval has been granted by each of the nine participating First Nations, for the purpose of collecting data that reflects a community's overall available workforce, including knowledge, skills and abilities.

AETS will be able to analyze the data with each community and use it to remove barriers and improve education, training, and employment-related programs and services for community members.

The project commenced in 2019, with 44 other First Nation Communities. Since the start, there are now over 70 First Nations across Canada participating.

Participating First Nation Communities:

- Animbiigoo Zaag'igan Anishinaabek (Lake Nipigon),
